Manuel Marsol is the only Spanish author to have been awarded the International Illustration Award at the Bologna Children Book Fair

Astro is, strictly speaking, Marsol's first work, unpublished to date, which its author has rescued and updated using all the artistic experience he has acquired over the years. Astro was the catalyst that made the author abandon a successful career in the field of advertising to try to artistically capture a subject of great personal and sentimental importance, the loss of his father.

A VERY LIGHT GIRL AND A VERY HEAVY GIRL

Kirim Nam

Kirim Nam debuts in the picture book with a story of disarming beauty in which two antagonistic young women must confront their natures in order to reach the balance of being. Conceived as an atypical coming of age with echoes of Tao and Western, the adventure of the two young protagonists presents them alone, intertwined and wandering, like two characters from Juan Rulfo's El llano en llamas, facing an inhospitable world of ruins and desolate landscapes. Only the tension of their antithetical nature drives them on, perhaps dreaming of the end, until a misunderstanding forces them to face the uncertainties of the world alone.

Using a graphic concept of extreme simplicity, structured in vertical double-page illustrations, Kirim Nam turns his little fable into a disturbing, liberating and unforgettable book.

YOKAI - THE MOUNTAIN

Manuel Marsol and Carmen Chica

The authors of multi-awarded O tempo do gigante are back with Yokai, an evocative and poetic album on the transforming power of nature.

Wild nature is something extraordinary. Taking a wildlife cruise is like going through an invisible door. The world changes around us and our identity changes. To get lost in the mountain, in any mountain, means losing something we were in our past life. Once we come back to our ordinary life, like in a dream, the known world becomes uncharted for just a moment. And crisply, we understand that on our short stroll we were someone else.
